If you're searching for a quick to run dapp, then Delegated Proof of Stake (DPoS) is the cryptocurrency for you. Its reputation for security, accessibility and significant contributions to the cryptocurrency wallet space mean it's still one of the most popular cryptocurrencies to use - and with DPoS it's much easier to make your money go a little further. DPoS is a dynamic consensus mechanism that requires minimal resources, making it extremely accessible and efficient. The DPoS consensus model Unlike PoW blockchains that use miners to maintain the blockchain network, DPoS uses validators to keep it afloat. These validators are randomly chosen from a fixed set of validators - as opposed to the randomness of miners in PoW blockchains. The validators are instead rewarded in proportion to how many votes they receive. Essentially, the more votes they receive, the more rewards they are awarded - which incentivises them to make sure they are as popular as possible. While DPoS works great for fast block times and intuitive functionality, it also means you are vulnerable to centralized attack as the validators make their decisions. To reduce this vulnerability to attack, the network has the ability to force a change in validators via a hard fork and rebalance the system back to the correct balance of validators. This tends to happen when there is an extra large change, such as a huge sell off of cryptocurrencies by large holders, and there is a high probability that the loss of trust is caused by a single entity.package org.nutz.boot.servlet.filter; import javax.servlet.Filter; import javax.servlet.FilterChain; import javax.servlet.FilterConfig; import javax.servlet.ServletException; import javax.servlet.ServletRequest; import javax.servlet.ServletResponse; import javax.servlet.http.HttpServlet; import javax.servlet.http.HttpServletRequest; import javax.servlet.http.HttpServletResponse; import java.io.IOException; import org.junit.Assert; import org.junit.Before; import org.junit.Test; import org.mockito.Mock; import org.nutz.boot
